

SNEAD GRAVESIDE GUARDED BY POLICE

Members of Mysterious Family Prevented From Attending Funeral.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The body of Mrs. Oney W. M. Snead, victim of the bathtub mystery of East Orange, N. J., was buried in Mt. Hope Cemetery, Westchester county, N. Y.

The graveside was guarded by New York detectives, under orders to place under arrest any relative of the dead woman who should attend, but none appeared.

The expenses of the funeral were paid by the officials of East Orange, no member of the family having offered to bury the woman on whose life many thousands dollars' worth of insurance was carried.

The hearse containing the woman's body was driven past the building at 66 West Twenty-third street, New York, where the aged grandmother, Mrs. Martha E. Wardlaw, and the aunt and mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Snead, have been living ever since the arrest of Miss Virginia Wardlaw, who it is alleged took Mrs. Oney Snead to the unfinished house in East Orange, where she is said to have drowned herself in a bathtub.

Neither of the two women came out of the house to gaze at the hearse as it passed, though Mrs. Virginia Wardlaw grew hysterical in the Newark jail, where she is held on the murder charge, when she was refused permission to attend the funeral.

The police are still trying to learn the whereabouts of Fletcher W. Snead, missing husband of the dead woman. They believe Snead has been under hypnotic influence of Miss Wardlaw, and that while under this influence he decided to her all his property in Kentucky and made his insurance policies payable to her. He cannot be found.

Oney's Father War Hero.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Dec. 3.—Mrs. Oney Wardlaw Martin Snead, whose body was found in a bathtub in East Orange, N. J., was well known here in Henderson, Ky., where she had visited. She was the daughter of Col. "Bob" Martin, of the Confederate army, who, during the civil war, aided Gen. Adam Johnson in the cavalry and infantry advances in southern Indiana, and also aided in the capture of Newburg, a town a short distance from here.

PLANS TO RID NAVY OF OLDER OFFICERS

Secretary Meyer Proposes to Shove Young Men to Front.

had in the history of this country, not much for the sake of the young officers themselves as because he realizes that the good of the service absolutely demands the innovation.

The advisability of restoring the rank of vice admiral has been emphasized by the fact that not in the foreign navy has a man in command of little more than a gunboat outranked an American rear admiral, who is in command of six or a dozen battleships. This is not particularly agreeable to the American navy or to the country's pride, and the restoration of the title would remedy the situation.

GREATEST OF GUNS FOR NEW WARSHIPS

That the two new 28,000-ton battleships Arkansas and Wyoming, now being built for the American navy, will carry the most powerful twelve-inch guns yet designed is asserted by Rear Admiral Mason, of the Bureau of Ordnance, in his report to the Secretary, which was made public today.

The huge ships will have twelve guns of this new type.

Admiral Mason says: "A twelve-inch gun of the new design has been completed and tested, with results which show it to be at least the equal of any gun thus far proposed abroad. In proof of this gun developed an initial velocity of 3,000 feet-per-second and a muzzle energy of 2,500 tons. In five rounds, fired at 17,000 yards range, the division was less than 100 yards.

"This means that five shells fired at a range of over nine and one-half miles all struck within the radius of less than 200 yards. This new fourteen-inch gun, however, which is soon to be tested, is still more powerful. It will fire a projectile weighing 1,400 pounds with a velocity of 3,500 feet-per-second, representing a muzzle energy of 3,500 foot-tons.

Of the Arkansas and Wyoming, Admiral Mason says: "The new battleships are each to carry a main battery of twelve twelve-inch guns, and secondary batteries of twenty-one five-inch guns. The twelve-inch guns designed for these ships are of a new mark and will be much more powerful than any gun now afloat."

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MRS. STEWART

Wife of Paymaster General of the Navy Will Be Buried in Arlington Cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Susan Stewart, wife of Paymaster General Edwin Stewart, U. S. N., retired, will take place at the residence of Admiral Andrew Dunlap, 1428 Massachusetts avenue, northwest, at 10:30 o'clock, Friday morning. The officiating minister has not been selected. Interment will take place at Arlington Cemetery.

Mrs. Stewart was married in this city twenty-seven years ago, and lived here with her husband until his retirement from active naval service. At the time of her death she was on a visit to the home of Admiral Dunlap. Her husband and two sons, William E. and Donald S. Stewart, were at her bedside when she died.

Besides her husband and the two sons named, Mrs. Stewart was survived by a third son, Laurence, a midshipman, who arrived in Washington this morning, having left his ship at Norfolk last night upon receipt of word of his mother's illness.

SLAYER OF HUSBAND TELLS OF SHOOTING

Self-Defense Claimed by Pennsylvania Woman in Fight at Night.

WARREN, Pa., Dec. 3.—A story of a duel to the death with revolvers, between a husband and wife in a darkened room during the night, the killing of the husband by the wife, and her writing to a son telling of the deed, was unfolded here today by Mrs. Anna Anderson, a gray-haired woman of fifty-six, on trial for her life on the charge of murdering her husband.

Mrs. Anderson is making a plea of self defense and according to her testimony, Anderson always mistreated and abused her. On the day of October 21, they were alone at their home. The couple quarreled until 11 o'clock at night, and when Mrs. Anderson refused to retire, she saw her husband come into the room with a revolver in his hand. He ordered her to kneel and pray, saying that when she came to "amen" he would kill her. Mrs. Anderson prayed long, she declared, and her husband then ordered her into her bedroom. She went to her room, but kept the revolver from the floor to protect herself. Immediately Anderson awoke, she said, Mrs. Anderson jumped from the bed, and the husband fired, but missed. The woman returned the fire and declared she did not know how many shots she fired, but kept the revolver pointed toward her husband and kept pulling the trigger until she dropped him in a faint. When Mrs. Anderson awoke, she found her husband lay dead across the bed.

The trial has aroused intense interest here, and the courtroom was crowded today. The greatest sympathy is expressed for Mrs. Anderson.

Three sons of Mrs. Anderson were in court with their wives during the trial, and as the woman told various stories of her husband's cruelties they nodded their approval.

FACULTY OF VALE HELD UP TO SATIRE

Signs Satirizing Recent Rules Are Spread Around the University Campus.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Dec. 3.—When the professors and students of Yale appeared today every tree and post on the campus was adorned with a big sign, in flaming letters, satirizing the recent rules of the faculty, which go into effect January 6, relating principally to compulsory attendance at chapel and classes by the student body.

The satire substitutes the following for some of the proposed new rules:

A student whose scholarship, attendance at chapel or classes, is unsatisfactory, shall be put to death.

Cuts taken immediately before or after meals shall count triple.

The penalty for cutting chapel shall be imprisonment for life.

A student may be fired for any cause whatsoever. The trial of the offense shall, of course, receive absolutely no consideration. However, a student may be fired more than once.

Special prizes will be awarded any student or students (if more than one) graduating under the new system.

It is to be believed that as these new rules are extremely lax, so shall their enforcement be extremely lenient.

It is reported that the faculty is highly incensed and will take immediate steps to attempt to learn the names of the perpetrators.

Palmer the entire frontage on the north side of Clifton street, Columbia Heights, from Eleventh street west to Mrs. John A. Logan's residence. Belt, O'Brien & Co. made the deal.

The purchasers intend to erect dwellings upon the property. The sale of the tract disposes of the entire square bounded by Eleventh, Twelfth, Clifton, and Euclid streets. Belt, O'Brien & Co. having represented all the purchasers in the block.

William Gibbs & Daniel report the sale for Augustus C. Morris, of premises 1141 I street northwest, which is one of a row of sixteen houses built several years ago by Charles W. King. The purchaser is Mrs. Emma L. Slye. The consideration, it is said, having been $2,500.

The same firm has sold for Clarence H. Right premises 1529 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. The consideration was $2,750. The purchaser was William R. Shannon & Luchs report the sale to O. H. George, of the residence at 628 Keefe street for a consideration of $2,750. George intends to occupy the property.

It is settled in any case that there will be a Congressional inquiry, sooner or later, because tariff questions in connection with sugar are to be brought forward before the session is very old, which will make investigation almost inevitable if any progress is obtained.

SUGAR TRUST PROBE STILL IS POSSIBLE

Many Congressional Lawyers Take Issue With President Taft.

Despite the objections of the Department of Justice and the President, it is possible there will yet be a Congressional investigation of the Sugar trust.

Some of the people who strongly advocate an inquiry declare today such a proceeding will not only not interfere with the prosecution of the coming criminal cases, but will in all probability help, by developing matters which could not be brought out in court, and getting people to testify who could not be induced to do so in court.

Many of the best lawyers in Congress sharply disagree with the President's Attorney General as to the possibility of immunity being conferred on the officials by reason of any investigation in a Congressional investigation.

Simple Matter.

Even if there were possibility of embarrassment on this or any other account, they say, it is a simple matter for the Department of Justice to assign a lawyer to assist in the conduct of an investigation, who would be able to advise with counsel for the committee, and steer it away from areas of personal investigation, why believe there might be possibility of an immunity grant being involved.

William Wickesham is credited with special insistence that there shall be no participation by Congress in the Sugar trust business. The Congressional people who believe an investigation would help rather than hurt, are in the uncomfortable position of not wanting to take more than their share of responsibility.

Member's Views.

"If the Government fails to get results from its prosecution, we don't, of course, want the responsibility to be pushed over later on the shoulders of Congress, which investigation injured the Government's cause in court," said a member of Congress today.

An investigation by Congress would personally I have no idea that such an investigation would help the prosecution, except as it would in all probability develop a lot of facts which would help the prosecution and couldn't be developed otherwise.

WHALLEY ADMITS BEING A DESERTER

Defense in Sugar Trials Scores Heavily in Cross Examination.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Counsel for the six former employees of the American Sugar Refining Company, who are on trial for conspiracy to defraud the Government out of customs duties on sugar importations, today in the United States Circuit Court cross-examined Richard Whalley, the special employee of the Treasury Department, who assisted Richard Parr in the detection of the "doctored" scales on the Williamsburg docks, in an endeavor to impeach his character and discredit his testimony.

"Isn't it a fact," demanded Attorney Cochran, "that you deserted from the United States army?"

"I suppose it is," was the reply.

Henry L. Stimson, special Government prosecutor, objected, and Cochran explained that he had the right to discredit a witness and prove his unreliability.

"I want to show," he said, "that Whalley committed a crime against the United States and that he was never convicted."

Whalley was then questioned regarding his relations with Edwin Anderson, the former head boss of the Sugar trust, who has put in a claim for reward for giving the Treasury Department information regarding the fraud manipulation. The witness told of having signed an agreement by which Anderson, and a broker named Charles M. Daily were to give him a share of any reward.

Whalley told of going to Washington in 1907 with another person and of a conference there with James L. Garry, then chief of the customs of the department. He said that while he was in Washington he was placed in the Government service. Subsequently he worked at the direction of Parr, and helped the latter in his investigation of scale manipulation which ended in the raid of November 26, 1907, when a cargo of sugar was seized.

PREPARE EDUCATION ON NEW TARIFF LAW

Resolutions to Print Certain Speeches Presented in Senate.

"They are already preparing for the fight on the new tariff law," was the comment of a Democratic Senator today on the action of Senators Hale (Rep. Maine) and Carter (Rep. Montana) in the Senate yesterday.

Hale presented a resolution to print as a public document Cannon's speech at Kansas City denouncing the Republican insurgents who opposed the enactment of the new tariff law, and Carter that similar use be made of President Taft's speech at Winona upholding that law.

When the documents have been printed they can be sent through the mails by Congressmen free of charge.

Similar action will be taken by Democratic leaders with speeches that give promise of helping their party in next year's Congressional elections.
